Short back story

In the last sprint meeting, we presented a 20% improvement in time on page and a 7% increase in CTA click rate after enhancing readability by simply changing the font size, font weight, and line spacing on our keyword pages. Then we received the unfortunate news of the IT section shutting down. Malek and I (designers) suggested a redesign of the landing pages and flows to apply everything we've gained and learned from Dadsun's user behavior. a proper farewell 🐱

Submission request

1. Increase submitted requests

By simplify Dadsun presentation, improve user experience in the flow, and make the process easier and shorter

2. Increase time on page.

By Improving UX writing and creating more diverse content

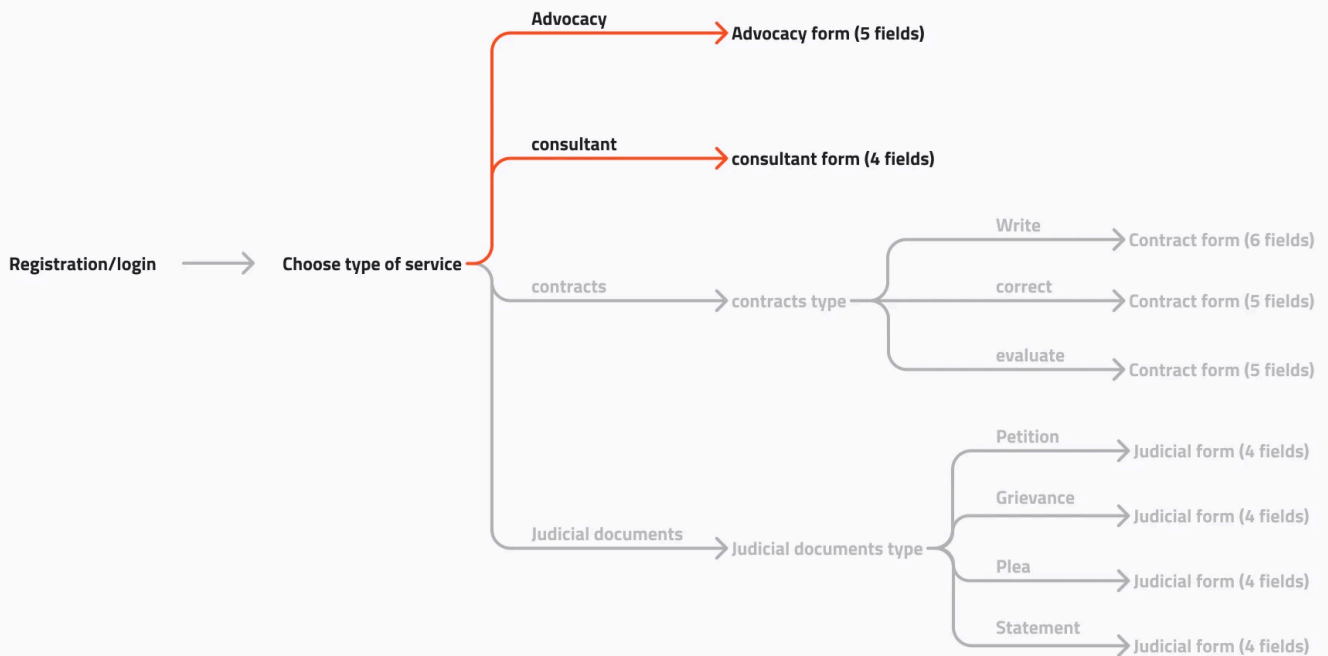

3. Decrease on user bounce rate.

Show users they are in the right place by enhancing the first impression through aesthetic usability and stronger mottos.

In one month 🎯

Let's start from flow

The old flow

• Are all this data that we get necessary?

We know that the easier the flow, the more likely people are to complete it. Our customer support team was already contacting users who submitted requests to boost the process, and Dadsun had paused the development of its specialized AI for automatic lawyer suggestions. We also found that users are more willing to share their data when interacting with customer support. All of these factors, combined with our goal to increase the request submission rate, led us to streamline the process by cutting unnecessary steps and focusing on just three crucial parameters:

City Category Type of service

• Order matters!

We decided to start with the easiest step for the user: selecting their city. It's something everyone knows and isn't sensitive information. After completing this simple first step, users are more engaged, leading to a higher likelihood of conversion.

City → Category → Type of service → Registration/Login

• 1200 categories to choose in a search input? Let's refine it!

Since now this part is not in a form and has it's own step in the flow, we have the freedom to be more creative.

We used 8 General categories instead of 1200

added I don't know option

Added Search bar for who knows!

• Could type of services be more practical?

We observed many users struggling to choose the right type of service. Part of this issue originated from UX writing that wasn't easily understandable for the average person. Based on user behavior and our capabilities, we decided to:

Based on users behaviors and our potential:

Advocacy

Consultant

Contracts

Judicial documents

Advocacy

Consultant before advocacy

In person consultant

On call consultant

A smoother flow + Prototype 📌

1. City

- An easy step to start from
- executable in various styles across all pages

2. Category

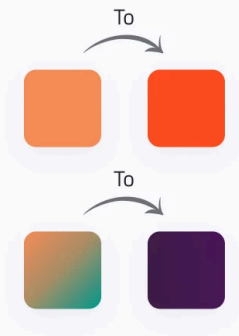

- Clear categories
- Search bar
- Availability of an 'I don't know' option.

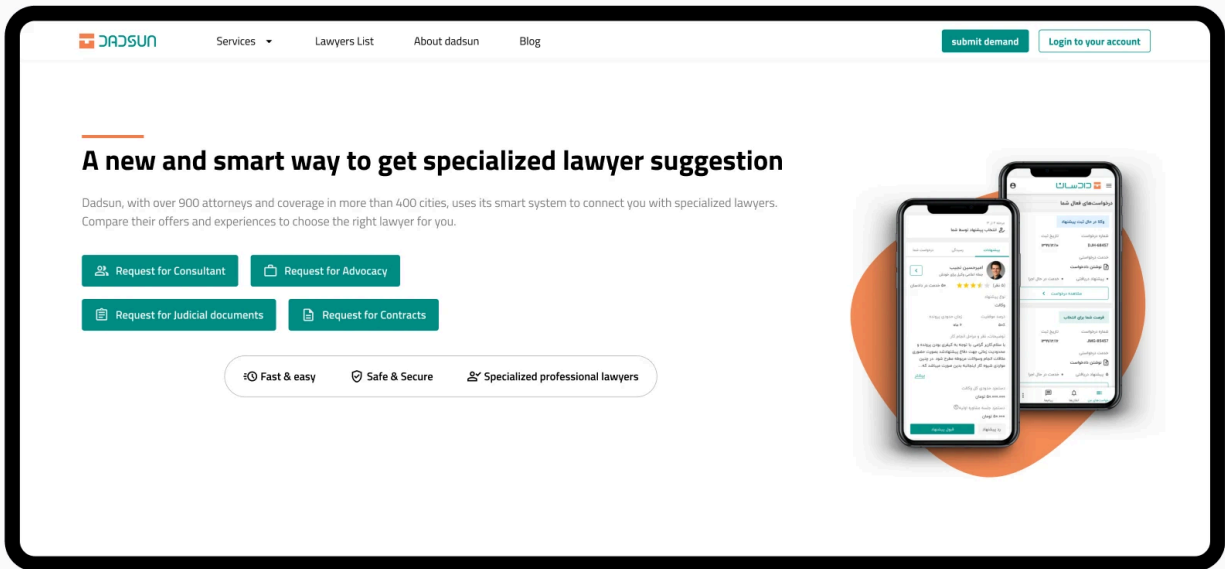

3. type of service

- Focus on attracting Advocacy & consultant customers
- Distinguishable Items and sufficient contrast

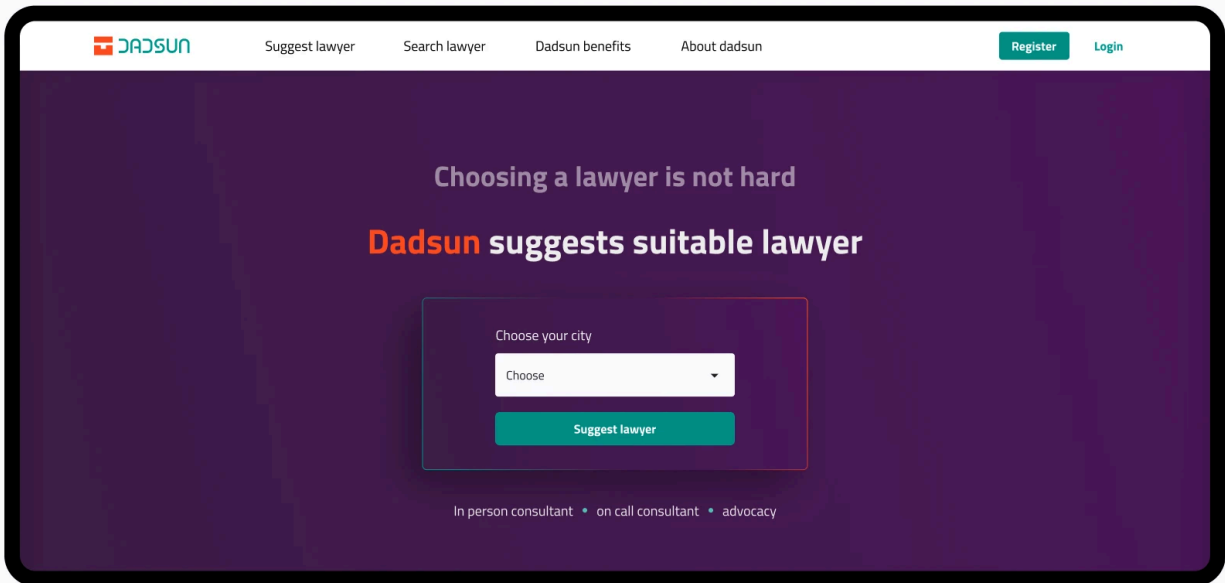

- After checking the prototype, move your mouse outside the prototype zone and then scroll to see the rest of the case study.

- To have a sharper color.
 - To increase contrast for better usability.
 - To allow occasional writing with this color.
- To have a color that complements both our green and orange.
 - To create a more aesthetic background for our flow.

To ↘

- Let's keep it simple.
- 4 different CTAs? In the hero? Probably not the best idea. Let's replace them with the first step of our flow instead.
- See this purple in the background? It's the background color for our flow. That's how we created the pattern.
- Can you see the use of our new catchy orange? Now we can even write with it!
- Let's improve the UX writing. We only answered "What does Dadsun do?", should be enough.
- We don't need two different buttons for our flow in the menu! Instead we need a register button.

To

The Idea:
Building connections between lawyers and users is not against Dadsun's benefits!

- We have a rich library of lawyers, so why not showcase it?
- Highlighting that our lawyers are certified boosts user trust in our platform.
- Let's add more contrast between the different cards here.

Presenting more info will create greater contrast between the different cards.

Having trouble choosing a lawyer?

Dadsun will suggest specialized lawyers in 3 steps!

Choose your city

Choose

Suggest specialized lawyer

- I assume the difference between the current and old background color is pretty self-explanatory.
- Here, the user might get frustrated searching through the lawyer list. This is exactly why Dadsun exists, right? So let's sell that by clearly showing what we do.
- Those sharing buttons are clicked maybe once a month, so we should probably remove them.

The Idea:

On this page, this card should be enough for users to decide whether this is their lawyer or not.

- Promoting lawyers with more details.
- Creating more contrast between each lawyer.
- Providing more options for users to compare lawyers.
- Send a request for this lawyer as the main function from here!

The Idea:

The CTA should always be accessible, so let's make it a sticky card that's always visible.

- One CTA instead of 4
- We've observed users bypassing Dadsun to make agreements. This is a good place to explain why they shouldn't. The reason is that we guarantee the process and handle any complexities that may arise (Which so likely to happen in Iran).
- A link to 'Dadsun Benefits' for those who have doubts about using Dadsun.
- Improvement on hierarchy.

Let's talk prototype!

- If the view is messy: Press Z until content scale is on "fit width"
- Bring your mouse out of prototype zone if you want to scroll on the case study

Achievements!

36%

49%

55%

Thank you! 🙌

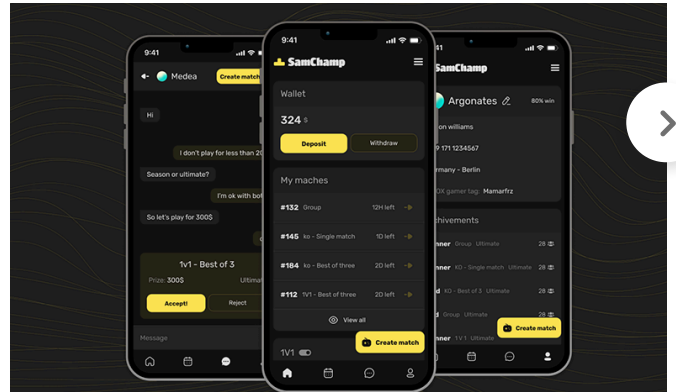

While I've only provided a brief overview of the project here, it feels appropriate to conclude at this point. It's worth noting that this project was originally created in Persian. For the purposes of showcase for this case study, excerpts were translated to english, which is why I haven't included more shots. Feel free to contact me if you have any questions or if my experience on this project could be helpful for yours!
